Moynihan talks on Mideast

By David B. Koretz

"The US has forgotten the elemental fact of life, that ... the object of totalitarian governments is the destruction of the State of Israel, because its defiance of danger is symbolic of the strength and endurance of democratic ideals." (p. 777, when the United Nations resolution on Zionism was passed, Moynihan, then representative to the UN, declared that the US would never acknowledge or acquiesce to that resolution.)

Eighteen months later, Moynihan wondered, "How will we have kept those vows?" The same Soviet government that sponsored the UN resolution, Moynihan pointed out, is now reaping economic aid from the United States.

Dorm heating fixed

By Steve Kirsch

Dormitory room temperatures have been fine-tuned by the computer people. Sometimes the solution is simply to "vent the radiator," a procedure which lets the air out of the radiator to allow it to function properly. Other times the solution is changing the present drop date.

As an informal student committee is sending a letter to all faculty members urging them to attend the December faculty meeting and present arguments for changing the present drop date. A report by the Committee on Academic Policy (CAP) recommends that students be allowed to drop only one course after the fifth week of the term. This proposal endorsed by the Committee on Educational Policy (CEP), will be up for a vote at the Dec. 21 faculty meeting, although the CEP has recommended that the question be tabled until the February meeting.

The letter is being drawn up by a committee composed of six students - 3 of whom are seniors who have already completed their coursework and 3 undergraduates. Many residents of McCormick's west tower found it necessary to dress warmly while studying and sleeping as temperatures reached the mid-50's in some rooms. The heating situation on the tower has "diluted" the student's effort to perform well for their learning potential, according to Housmaker Stephen D. Settura '78. About 15 students participated in a meeting last Tuesday night at which an initial draft of the letter was discussed.
