Suicide is tragic for everyone

By Bob Wasserman

Whether the tragic news of a suicide at MIT comes up, the first reaction is to ask why. For what is the cause of such a thing? For whom is this event? Suicides certainly cause a great deal of concern, either by depressed friends of the first suicide, or by someone who is unfamiliar with the pressures involved in his life.

College should be a place to expand areas of knowledge, not narrow them down to focus on a single college major. As students move through the system, they often have many different major influences. As students move through the system, they often find themselves with a large number of obligations, from deadlines to exams. These pressures often contribute to a great deal of anxiety.

But why are there a large number of suicides in the spring, the most stressful time of the year? Oddly enough, suicides during the winter are rare, but during the fall and spring, they seem much more frequent. Full is generally the time of beginning a new school or new program for many members of the college community, and as such can be the period of greatest anxiety.

Suicide is tragic for everyone. It causes great disappointment to the Admissions office. Is it possible that MIT might recruit everyone concerned.

The pressures from these decisions often contribute to a great deal of anxiety. But why are there a large number of suicides in the spring, the most stressful time of the year? Oddly enough, suicides during the winter are rare, but during the fall and spring, they seem much more frequent. Full is generally the time of beginning a new school or new program for many members of the college community, and as such can be the period of greatest anxiety.

But why are there a large number of suicides in the spring, the most stressful time of the year? Oddly enough, suicides during the winter are rare, but during the fall and spring, they seem much more frequent. Full is generally the time of beginning a new school or new program for many members of the college community, and as such can be the period of greatest anxiety.

But why are there a large number of suicides in the spring, the most stressful time of the year? Oddly enough, suicides during the winter are rare, but during the fall and spring, they seem much more frequent. Full is generally the time of beginning a new school or new program for many members of the college community, and as such can be the period of greatest anxiety.

But why are there a large number of suicides in the spring, the most stressful time of the year? Oddly enough, suicides during the winter are rare, but during the fall and spring, they seem much more frequent. Full is generally the time of beginning a new school or new program for many members of the college community, and as such can be the period of greatest anxiety.

But why are there a large number of suicides in the spring, the most stressful time of the year? Oddly enough, suicides during the winter are rare, but during the fall and spring, they seem much more frequent. Full is generally the time of beginning a new school or new program for many members of the college community, and as such can be the period of greatest anxiety.

But why are there a large number of suicides in the spring, the most stressful time of the year? Oddly enough, suicides during the winter are rare, but during the fall and spring, they seem much more frequent. Full is generally the time of beginning a new school or new program for many members of the college community, and as such can be the period of greatest anxiety.