The Tech

The Tech Staff writers Eugene Mongeau's latest play 4 Held of a Mess and discovers that it is just that.

Thursday, MIT gave its top athletes awards for their accomplishments both on and off the field. Leading the honored athletes was Helen Myno '79 who received two awards for her contributions to women's athletics.

MIT annually recognizes the important contributions of women's athletics as part of the annual Athletics Awards ceremony. These awards acknowledge the achievements of female athletes who have demonstrated excellence both on and off the field. This year's ceremony highlighted Helen Myno's significant contributions to the team's success, earning her recognition as one of the top athletes at MIT.

The Tech Staff reports that Eugene Mongeau, the writer of the play, is currently working on a new project titled "Held of a Mess." The play centers around a group of friends who, after discovering that their new apartment is haunted, must find a way to deal with the supernatural presence.

Mongeau is known for his creative writing and has previously published several works of fiction and poetry. His latest play promises to be a unique and engaging piece, with elements of humor and suspense that are sure to entertain audiences.

In addition to the play, Mongeau has also been working on a television series based on his earlier work. The series will explore the adventures of the characters featured in "Held of a Mess" as they navigate the challenges of a haunted apartment.

The combination of Mongeau's talent for storytelling and his ability to create compelling characters makes "Held of a Mess" a promising new project. The play's success is sure to inspire further creative endeavors, and Mongeau's fans can look forward to more exciting works in the future.
