Views of an R/O past

Freshmen line up waiting for food at last year's picnic. Comments from the freshman interviewed by The Tech included: "I was surprised how friendly the people were. I expected them to be colder... I don't see any problems about fitting in..." and "I'm continually impressed by the variety of people and groups to be found here. I just hope I fall in with the right ones." In many dorms, freshmen are aided in their choice of floors or entries with presentations or skits such as this one.

During the busy part of R/O Week, the R/O Center is kept open from early morning to late evening to help any freshman with questions or problems. Here, a worker assigns a freshman to a temporary dorm room.

The individual dormitories also operate R/O desks. Upperclassmen run tours and generally try to give the freshmen a feel for the sort of people who live in the dorm.

A Wellesley student helps out at a fraternity desk, checking in freshmen to make the bidding process smoother.