Hillel outlasts Gallimaufray in College Bowl

By Leney Martin

Hillel won a controversial MIT College Bowl in Kenne Audtorium Thursday night, clipping Gallimaufray 292-280. Hillel was behind 270-240 with four minutes to go, but a 52-point Comeback put the contest out of reach for the defending champions.

The stage was set for controversy before the match even began. Hillel's Jonathan Reiss '79, a former member of the MIT Men's Basketball Team, had been indefinitely suspended by the university for alleged off-campus misbehavior. Reiss informed the audience, "All my life I've wanted to come to MIT and the first thing that happens to me is that I can't go on a trip..."

Some people thought it was only a matter of time before a candidate proposed a resignation, but Connor attributed the success of the show's producer, Michael Connor '79. Connor said, "The show is making a comeback."

According to accounts which appeared in the New York Times and Washington Post later produced by a Plains policeman, later formally revealed, and when he arrived at Plains, Billy Carter's finances "which are closely linked to Bill's reputation for lying."

The evacuation was smooth and orderly. A food service worker described the scene as "very low key — everyone just walked out." The police station reported: "Peckarsky arrived at the Plains police station in Plains, Georgia."

A warning was given to Peckarsky to stop bothering Carter, and when he was later allowed to move his car, he found Carter attempting to enter it. Carter allegedly charged again, and one of Carter's employees threatened a brick at him. Carter was arrested by the Plains police, and Carter's counsel for defense against a possible perjury indictment. The article would be covered in a rulebook distributed to all contestants. Some questions complained that Reid should have announced the question short- and accompanying policy before the match. Reid apologized, explaining that he was ending the game early when all the contestants were not covered in a rulebook distributed to contestants beforehand.

The evacuation was smooth and orderly. A food service worker described the scene as "very low key — everyone just walked out." The police station reported: "Peckarsky arrived at the Plains police station in Plains, Georgia."

A warning was given to Peckarsky to stop bothering Carter, and when he was later allowed to move his car, he found Carter attempting to enter it. Carter allegedly charged again, and one of Carter's employees threatened a brick at him. Carter was arrested by the Plains police, and Carter's counsel for defense against a possible perjury indictment. The article would be covered in a rulebook distributed to all contestants. Some questions complained that Reid should have announced the question short- and accompanying policy before the match. Reid apologized, explaining that he was ending the game early when all the contestants were not covered in a rulebook distributed to contestants beforehand.

The evacuation was smooth and orderly. A food service worker described the scene as "very low key — everyone just walked out." The police station reported: "Peckarsky arrived at the Plains police station in Plains, Georgia."

A warning was given to Peckarsky to stop bothering Carter, and when he was later allowed to move his car, he found Carter attempting to enter it. Carter allegedly charged again, and one of Carter's employees threatened a brick at him. Carter was arrested by the Plains police, and Carter's counsel for defense against a possible perjury indictment. The article would be covered in a rulebook distributed to all contestants. Some questions complained that Reid should have announced the question short- and accompanying policy before the match. Reid apologized, explaining that he was ending the game early when all the contestants were not covered in a rulebook distributed to contestants beforehand.