The campus occurs because of the commuting distance, according to Ruoff. It is for this reason that the NRSA exists. It is a "home away from home for the commuting students," according to the 1978 Undergraduate Residence Book. The NRSA serves many different purposes for its members. Twenty to thirty people can regularly be found at the organization's building at 31 Memorial Drive. Joe Kalk "89, a Roslindale resident and president of the NRSA, sees it "as a place to hang out... very eat to eat my lunch during the year." The building has a full kitchen for members use. It also has a study. (Please turn to page 2)

Although the pre-Broadway play Stingers deals with an unoriginal theme, Bruce Dern and Lois Nettleton give performances that make the production compelling. Page 8.

Colonnists of new fraternity still searching for housing

By Richard Salz
Contrary to prevalent rumor, Zeta Psi, MIT's newest fraternity, will not be moving into the infirmary building, according to Joe Chapman, "97, Fraternity Conference (IFC) President. "If they offered it, I'd take it, but the building isn't available. Also, the Institute doesn't want us there," commented Jim Shoemaker "92, a member of the Zeta Psi pledge class. Shoemaker also mentioned the complications of being on an-campus fraternity.

"Zeta Psi is looking for more immediate housing," said Chapman, noting that the plan to vacate the infirmary building by moving the fraternity with the rest of Health Services to one facility on Vassar Street is not finalized and may not even occur. Rather, Zeta Psi has some specific places in mind in the Back Bay area. "Their main restriction was that they would move as soon as they had enough members for a chapter," said Barbara Hill "92, IFC Vice-Chairman and a member of the expansion committee. The committee has been meeting with the pledges and their advisor, Ken Dill, a graduate student in the Sloan School of Management. Among other things, they've been advising the colonists about housing, renting, and providing them with sample constitutions. A Worcester.
