The primary moral ambiguity is involved with killing. Should Willard kill Kurtz — Kurtz really mad? It is all right to allow badly maimed people to live — is it humane?"-

For one point, the members of the parcel boat carrying Willard feel they must stop a joker on the river to conduct a routine check, despite Willard's protest that they continue. They start to search, finding nothing, then a woman on the junk boat to protect something — the men from the parcel boat open fire, supposing she was harboring the beast. With the joker just trying to protect a little puppy. Everyone but the woman lies shot to death, she being badly wounded. The patrol man says she must be brought to court.
