Hockey road trip takes its toll

By Lou Odette

The MIT hockey team returned to Cambridge late Monday night after a 5-4 record, following three games in 50 hours. Saturday evening, MIT hosted Stonehill College, one of the leaders in Division III last year, at the Baltimore Civic Center, followed by a Monday night game in Worcester.

The Stonehill game marked only the second time this season that MIT has opened the scoring, as three-year veteran Scott Schwartz '81 put MIT up front on an unassisted effort at 1:31 of the first period. The rest of the period was a see-saw battle, each team coming close but failing to finish off plays. Finally, Stonehill scored with 30 seconds left in the period, and threatened to take the momentum from MIT.

As the teams left the ice, an altercation broke out in the corridor leading to the dressing rooms, but the coaches and referees were on the scene right away, and the remainder of the game was without incident. The brief shoving match snapped MIT awake and the team came out flying in the second period. At 9:51 Dave Darmery '80 and Dale Malone '83 combined for a power play goal to put MIT on top. Assistant coach Trent Segalino, taking over the top job for this trip, used 30-second shifts to keep things hopping and his players fresh. MIT was doing all the little things right, getting between the man and the puck, finishing the check, and not taking chances.

On a Stonehill power play, Frank Sarniccolo G defeated a Stonehill defenseman's shot out towards center ice and raced to pick it up. Crossing the blue line at full speed, he went straight for the goal. Three moves later Scarabino had the puck in the net to provide what proved to be the winning margin.

The second period ended with MIT up 3-1, and with goaltender Larry Wagner '82 playing some of his best hockey this season, the lead stood until the ten minute mark of the third period. The Stonehill goal was countered by MIT's next shift, with Joe Minahan '83 scoring, assisted by Royce Bordeaux '81 and the team. MIT lost the game, 9-4, Monday night saw MIT in Worcester to play Nichols. Goaltender Wagner, while in great form earlier in the weekend, came up flat in this game, giving up a goal to each of Nichols first three shifts. The team came back and pulled to within one goal before Nichols scored again. After allowing five goals in the first period, Wagner took himself out of the game in favor of Rich Tucker '81. Tucker went in with no time to warm up and played an outstanding game, allowing only one goal in 40 minutes. MIT again struggled to within a single goal, but at the final buzzer the team was on the losing end of the 6-5 score.

BE ON THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS AT 22.

Think of a ship as a corporation, and it's not far fetched at all. A destroyer may have fifteen officers, other ships even fewer. Even the most junior officer gets to share in running the show.

You become part of the management team when you get your commission as an ensign after just 16 weeks of leadership training at Officer Candidate School.

As an Officer in the Navy, you and your shipmates are responsible for people and equipment almost immediately.

Many officers go on for further advanced schooling, including studies in the areas of fields for its officers—everything from nuclear propulsion to systems analysis, oceanography to inventory management. In graduate school, this training would cost you thousands, but in the Navy, we pay you.

Ask your Navy representative about officer opportunities, or mail this coupon for more information. Or call toll-free 800-841-8000 (in GA call toll-free 800-342-5855). There's no obligation, and you'll learn about an excellent way to start a career in management. As a college graduate you can get management experience in any industry, but you'll get to see—and make it happen in the Navy.
