The Screw and tourists

Does the silver-haired Republican from Illinois have a chance? I'm afraid not. Much as I'd love to see him in the White House, Anderson just has too much going against him. He's too liberal for the Republicans, and too conservative for the Democrats. Even if he starts immediately he probably can't get onto the ballot in more than 20 states.

More traditional obstacles include the lack of funds (an independent party is not eligible for the $29 million-plus in government money that the two other parties get). An independent hasn't had a hope of winning since the 1920s. On top of all that, the Carter machine is already gearing up to make a case against the legality of an Anderson bid.

It is certainly Carter who stands to lose the most from an Anderson campaign. If enough disaffected Democrats vote Anderson, this will effectively split the Democratic vote and put Reagan in the White House. Anderson counters that his own polls show that he will get equal support from both parties. Whatever the real answer, I hope he runs. If nothing else it will make this a damned interesting race.

Closer to home, this week, the annual Institute Screw contest is being held. Last year at this time, I wrote an article (admittedly for a somewhat less reputable journal than this one) suggesting that we award the Screw to Governor Ed "Jolt" King. Unfortunately, when approached, the Governor refused to allow his name to be entered in the contest, thereby losing several hundred dollars in revenue for charity. I once again request that Governor King be given the Screw. As for King's objections—what right does he have to deprive needy people of the money raised in what is a fun and charitable event? Finally, it's golfish time again. I was on my way to a class a few days ago when I found myself sandwiched. On one side was a tour group of about thirty, and on the other was a stopped Greyhound bus, filled with gawkers. I always get the feeling on these occasions that not only the Institute but also its inhabitants are on display.

The urge boils up inside of me to do something horribly "student-like"—make faces or give them all the finger. But then I reflect for a moment and realize that three poor suckers have to be subjected to something much more insulting. They have to look at each piece of modern "art" and architectural "marvels" at Kresge Auditorium, the Chapel, and Transparent Horizons. Then I laugh to myself and continue quietly on my way.
