Editor's note: this article is one of a series describing aspects of the Boston new wave scene. Ernestine: the last article in this series, describing College, contained a typographical error. Thank you. "College" has two types, one for each half, with two sets of color bands.

The newest small club in Boston is College, the intellectual Underground, a place for bookstores, the club seems to neatly put together some of the best shows in town.

Location

The Underground is at 1110 Commonwealth Avenue, the corner of the B.U. campus and Commonwealth Ave. Take the BU-8 south from Kenmore Square, Wave as you pass the Rat, and continue out Commonwealth Ave. for about 5 minutes. You'll pass B.U. Ave. and finally, Clark and Whitman St. This is your stop. Cross the street to the left. The last 300 feet is on your right, the bus stop at the bottom of the street. The corner is on your left. The last bit is on your right. The last bit is at the top of the hill. If you don't want to walk a cab fare or a short walk.

Physical Description

The Underground was originally a student lounge in the B.U. dormitory. It has been turned into a well-lit, well-designed club, but the owners have preserved the room's original peculiarities. There are a few small tables and chairs in the room, as well as a bar and booths, which are all dark.

The American Repertory Theatre's first production of the fall season is "The Glass Menagerie," opening Sept. 11 and running through Oct. 18. For information, call 457-8300.

Apologies, the Worth of God will be shown by the MIT Foreign Languages and Literature Section on Monday, Sept. 15, in room 6-120. Admission is free and open to the public.

A special magic in the air as the Boston Shakespeare Company opens its sixth season, with Macbeth (starting Sept. 10) and The Tempest (starting Oct. 14). Subscription memberships for the 1980-81 seasons are available. For tickets and information, call 267-5000.

Off the Wall presents a double opening on Sept. 3. Off the Wall (cinema) returns to the Central Square at 15 Pearl street and presents Off the Wall, the movie. Visible proof that a big budget and an established star aren't necessary to produce an intelligent, entertaining feature, the movie is shown at 6:30, 8:10, and 10pm, plus 4:30 Sat. and Sun., and midnight Fri. and Sat.

I was Raised A Catholic, but

Boring sermonettes...talks on money all the time, everyone telling me how to think...everything seemed so irrelevant...amoral...my parents' faith, not mine.

Young men and women who were "raised Catholics" decide that their conception of God seems somewhat different than that of the Catholic Church. The mists themselves, more than "Why go to church? and often they find the answer supplied from their own experience of "Because it is a sin to..." to quite inadequate. So every day people who genuinely seek God in their lives take one last look at their old parish church and decide never to go back to that one or any other.

Being raised a Catholic is not a uniform experience: many of us have fond memories of explorers, open-minded and lovable persons able to articulate in some way the grace of Catholicism. How can people baptized into Catholicism become more alive in faith, hope and love? How can believers also become competent contributors to moral development and the growth of technology?

"But this view of Church can't happen!"

We the Tech Catholic Community believe that this is happening and we want to bring this view of Church alive among ourselves, among our friends and colleagues. We invite you to take another look at the Catholic Church, as a body of people struggling emotionally and intellectually to both sustain a vision and bring it to bear in the modern world.

We are located at 313 Memorial Drive, telephone 3-2891.
