MDC investigating the murder case

Bingham, a Wellesley resident, worked in the Cambridge Courthouse in East Cambridge, as did Ryan. Both Ryan and Bingham had worked with MIT through the District Attorney's office, and both victims were known personally by the officers.

"People think they're on an island here... They probably won't listen until a student gets hurt"

"It's bad to see someone you know hurt like that... I wish we could somehow have done more," noted Socco.

The two campus policemen praised for their response to the "emergency" have worked as police at the university. Both Campus Policemen commented on the lack of campus-area security. "People think they're on an island here," said Fratto. "If the victim's car hadn't been there, those guys might have taken a walk into the Senior House courtyard, or over to Walker," said Socco.

"Our cells have gone haywire," said Fratto. "MIT has expanded in the last ten years, and we [the Campus Police] haven't." He continued, "Our twelve-to-four shift average forty calls a night." Fratto commented on the job market is tight for liberal arts majors, but for you Electrical Engineers and Computer Science majors, the sky's the limit!

As the year goes on, your campus will be the victim of the Computer Company Blitz. Companies from across the country will be interviewing on campus.
