Muskie to Iran: forget it — Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie rejected Iran's request that the United States withdraw its four AWACS radar planes from Saudi Arabia, saying "Their deployment is in our national interest." Muskie also said the US could do nothing to comply with Iraq's demand that the US prevent Jordan from aiding Iraq as "Jordan is a sovereign government that can make its own decisions." Muskie offered no concessions in the "negotiations by press conferences" that are being conducted over the fate of the 52 American hostages in Iran.

Greek Prime Minister George Rallis confirmed that his nation has agreed to rejoin the military wing of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO). The move is seen as one which will strengthen the alliance against the USSR. Greece had pulled out of the mutual-protection group in 1974 to protest the Turkish occupation of part of Cyprus.

Blue Mondays a serious threat — Canadian researchers have found that more men with no previous signs of heart trouble had fatal coronary attacks on Monday than on any other day. The study of 4000 men over 32 years of age showed returning to job stress, activity, and pollution after a weekend reprieve might trigger arrhythmia, or irregular heartbeat, which could lead to a heart attack.

Union wins big in South — Workers of the J. P. Stevens Company, long a symbol of adamant resistance to unionization in the South, unanimously approved their first-ever collective bargaining contract. The vote marks the elimination of nearly two decades of battle between management and workers fighting for the right to be represented by a union. Under the new contract, the average wages will be $5 per hour.

Local

Ping-pong balls attack local college — A local travel agent took to the skies to protest against the Bunker Hill Community College student newspaper. When the paper refused to run his ad, John Balestieri dropped 500 ping-pong balls on the campus from a rented helicopter. Said Balestieri, "I just wanted to let them know in a big way that I don't like to be pushed around."

Sports

Phillies take 3-2 Series edge — A two-run ninth-inning rally keyed by Del Unser's double past Willie Aikens led the Phi's to a 4-3 victory over the Royals in game five of the World Series Sunday at Kansas City. Tug McGraw struck out Jose Cardinal with the bases loaded and two out in the bottom of the inning to nail down his first World Series win. Kansas City had tied the series with 4-3 and 5-3 victories on Friday and Saturday.

Weather

According to the National Weather Service, the early morning temperatures will be in the low 30's, working up to afternoon highs in the mid 50's. Skies will be clear and sunny, with mostly cool breezes during the day. Guests of wind from the west up to 20 miles per hour. Tonight will be clear and chilly with overnight lows in the low 40's. Wednesday will be clear, sunny skies but will have little change in temperature.
