Iran sets hostage terms — The Iranian Majlis set terms Sunday for the release of the 52 American hostages still held in Tehran. According to Tehran radio, the hostages will only be released together if all set conditions for release are met. Otherwise, they will be released in stages as the U.S. complies with Iran's terms. President Carter commented that the Iranian action "appears to offer a positive hint" for the future release of the hostages. Complications may arise, however, as there have been reports that the students are now unwilling to release the hostages to the Iranian government.
