Fed. loan program to emphasize need

By Tony Zamparutti

Robert E. White was dismissed yesterday from his position as ambassador to El Salvador by Secretary of State Alexander Haig.

White has been criticized by conservatives for his statements and actions as ambassador. White advocated links between US military and economic aid to the moderate right-wing government of El Salvador.

His support for land redistribution in El Salvador also angered Republican conservatives including Senator Jesse Helms, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Latin America.

El Salvador has been torn by a guerrilla war between the existing government and leftists.

The Carter administration sent $10 million in military assistance and $90 million in economic aid to El Salvador. In the US, as well as in the CIA and the Department of Defense, it advocated increasing military assistance. During the transition to the Reagan administration, several Carter advisors publicly voiced disapproval of Carter administration policy toward El Salvador. White claimed that these comments undermined his authority as ambassador and increased tensions in the country.

His first actions as Secretary of State, Haig summoned White to Washington. The Reagan administration is now reviewing US policy toward El Salvador.

While having been a Foreign Service officer for 25 years, a career diplomat, he cannot be fired from the State Department, but must be offered a new position within 90 days. He was appointed as ambassador to El Salvador last spring.

Fed. loan program to emphasize need

By Tony Zamparutti

Robert E. White was dismissed yesterday from his position as ambassador to El Salvador by Secretary of State Alexander Haig.

White has been criticized by conservatives for his statements and actions as ambassador. White advocated links between US military and economic aid to the moderate right-wing government of El Salvador.

His support for land redistribution in El Salvador also angered Republican conservatives including Senator Jesse Helms, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Latin America.

El Salvador has been torn by a guerrilla war between the existing government and leftists.

The Carter administration sent $10 million in military assistance and $90 million in economic aid to El Salvador. In the US, as well as in the CIA and the Department of Defense, it advocated increasing military assistance. During the transition to the Reagan administration, several Carter advisors publicly voiced disapproval of Carter administration policy toward El Salvador. White claimed that these comments undermined his authority as ambassador and increased tensions in the country.

His first actions as Secretary of State, Haig summoned White to Washington. The Reagan administration is now reviewing US policy toward El Salvador.

While having been a Foreign Service officer for 25 years, a career diplomat, he cannot be fired from the State Department, but must be offered a new position within 90 days. He was appointed as ambassador to El Salvador last spring.