Eric R. Fleming

What's in a name?

As the winter sports season here finally draws to a close, I thought about a couple of articles I saw in the Globe in December. The stories I recall (actually, one was a column by Larry Roberts) were selections for "all-name teams." I said to myself, "what about an MIT team all-name team?" So, after procuring numerous programs from our home events this winter, I present the "Eric Fleming all-name team for 1980-81."

Finally, the selection for the best name of the winter season.

Squash looks to '82
By Nick Corner

'82's Voice: Nick Corner is the manager of the varsity squash team. The varsity squash team finished its season last weekend with a strong showing in the nationals at Yale University. Led by senior Artistic Calkins, 15-4 match record, the team finished the 30-31 campaign at 4-7. However, expectations among MIT and the squash club, and few others, that the team would claim the national title were dashed last weekend. The 5-0 loss to Bowdoin, 6-1, shows the team's weaknesses.

W's fencing advances
By Lynn Maradian

The MIT women's fencing team had a tough battle Sunday in the New England Women's Intercollegiate Fencing Association Championships. After the 12-team competition, an unexpected three-way tie for first place resulted between Harvard, MIT, and Brandeis. Each team had won 33 bouts so the final rankings were determined by counting touches. By this method, Harvard edged out MIT and MIT beat Brandeis. MIT had topped Harvard 3-1 during the competition.

Nancy Robinson '81 qualified for the individual competitions. Robinson maintained exceptional performances all day to capture first place in the NEWIFA Individual Championships.

Other team members were Amelia Phillips '81, Yu-Pei Chang '83, and Paige Kolari '81. The top two teams, Harvard and MIT, will continue on to the Regional Championships next weekend in New York.
