DeRubeis and Ken Dumas, both of the class of 1984, voted on Tuesday in favor of the Coop slate. 233 students (45 percent) voted in the election. This is the largest turnout for a UA election since the student management was restructured in 1969.

The election of President of the class of 1981, Lynn Radlauer, was uncontested. He received 133 of the 431 senior votes.

The referendum for the class of 1982 passed by a large margin with 252 percent voting in favor of the referendum and 79 people opposing it. The vote was taken by vote of hand, and many students may have missed the question.

The referendum called for the freshman class to enact a new class constitution that would replace the two members at large elected under the Uniform (Colloid Constitution) by a Class Council.

A lighter note, UA DeRubeis noted, "I finally moved off the sports page. It's 12:15 a.m.

Students challenge Coop slate

Molyneux claims that the Coop management has "hired a professional who does not believe in union, and is interested in making our employes as few people as possible." He told the board who was in attendance concerning the type of union management.

The MIT Social Council has unanimously decided that no alcoholic beverages will be served during the concert to be held in the new Athletic Center on April 24, the Friday of Spring Weekend, according to Robert J. Holden, Assistant Dean for Student Affairs.

The council, which was concerned about the safety of the concert and the "soundness of the decision," decided as a result to ban alcohol from the event.

The council also decided to ban alcoholic beverages from all other events, including the Spring Weekend, which will be held on the same day as the concert.

The council stated that it was "grateful" for the support of the Student Assembly, which had previously approved the sale of alcoholic beverages at events.
