Fans hysterical after comeback

Parish rejects a Darryl Dawkins dunk attempt. Tiny Archibald steals a Lionel Hollins pass, and Bird is fouled, making two of three. 89-89 at 2:51. The Celtics fans BELIEVED. The Sixer crowd wondered.

Ewing missed a 22-footer, but Philly retains the ball. Another attempt by Dr. J. is rejected by Bird. Hollins misses a 22-footer, but Boston can't score either. The tension built. And built. Dawkins misses one from in close with Parish in his shorts. (who else) picks up the loose ball as bodies litter the floor under the Sixer hoop and drives down the court to pull-up for a jumper.

SWISH. Explosion. Boston 91, Philly 89 with 1:07 left. Elation and gloom. The time out lasts for hours.

Brad Stevens (17 gutsy minutes), which is shortly stolen by Hollins. He is fouled with 29 seconds to go. Philly fans see a glimmer of hope. Hollins misses the first. DOOM. Hollins misses the second, but that's it. NO PENALTY, the Celtics fourth foul of the quarter. 91-90. The first Sixer point since 5:24. The Celtics ran 23 seconds off the clock before Carr missed a jumper and four more seconds before Bobby Jones ripped the ball from Parish (who had rebounded) and called time. One second left. Jones' inbound pass bounced off the backboard to Maxwell. THE END.

And the beginning of the celebration! The noise from the Celtic fans drowned out the crowd at the Garden (which was booming from the speakers). People jumped and clapped and SCREAMED and screamed. But a few just walked quietly away.

REFRESHER COURSE.
You've burned the midnight oil and cracked more books than you care to remember. The work is done. The papers are in. So now you take a refresher course. The subject: ice cold Dos Equis beer. The Uncommon Import. Study a frosty glass. You'll learn it has a rich, amber color unlike any beer. Now test that big, bold flavor. You've got to admit, Dos Equis is in a class all by itself.
