long time now while other universities are just starting the program. Our approach is to prevent crime before it occurs. Colleges located within or near urban areas are most affected by crime problems. Some campuses, such as the University of Maryland, have almost become armed camps. The University of Maryland, located in College Park outside of Washington, DC, is fighting a nine-year battle against crime. Most of its campus entrances are barricaded every night to keep out the unwanted; visitor and parking lot gates are guarded to turn away cars with "suspicious occupants." As part of their fight against crime, the university has increased its police force by 40 percent over the last nine years. New locks were installed in dormitories, both outside and inside, and elevators were equipped with locks, so only people with keys could use them. Although security has increased, the crime rate still continues to climb. Theft rates decreased from 57 in 1976 to 42. Only the motor vehicle theft rate decreased from 1,273 in 1976 to 35 in 1980. Although security has increased, the crime rate still continues to climb. Theft and burglaries rose from 1,273 in 1976 to 1,411 in 1980. Violent crimes, including robberies, rapes, and attempted rapes increased from 30 to 42. Only the motor vehicle theft rate decreased from 57 in 1976 to 35 in 1980.
