Analysis

Whitehead debate dying

By Tony Zanzapico

The two MIT campus debate that MIT associate itself with an independent institute for biomedical research will the Whitehead Institute (WI) and M.I.T. Benefactor Edwin Whitehead have been an on-going issue in Boston. "It is still feasible that we will be appointed only at the Whitehead Institute. That would be according to their own desire or MIT's desire," said Baltimore. The Whitehead Institute will be completely financially independent from MIT due to a decision of Edwin Whitehead and its researchers need not hold teaching positions in the institute. Baltimore's vision of WI, however, is one of a research institute separate from MIT. "The whole travails over the past few months is to ensure that Whitehead Institute faculty can teach at MIT," said Baltimore. "It is still feasible that we will be appointed only at the Whitehead Institute. That would be according to their own desire or MIT's desire," said Baltimore. The Whitehead Institute will be completely financially independent from MIT due to a decision of Edwin Whitehead and its researchers need not hold teaching positions in the institute.

Student assaulted on Mass. Avenue

By Ivan Fong

Robert A. Gallo, a former MIT student and currently a graduate student at MIT, was assaulted at the Blood Drive on Friday. Gallo was beaten in the head and face by a car that hit him in the head and face at Mass. Avenue and subsequently taken to Mount Auburn Hospital late Saturday night. Gallo has a report of the assault and Campus Police Lieutenant Joseph McClosky plans to file a complaint for hearing before the Cambridge Third District Court, as was the registration number of the assailant car as confirmed, according to McClosky. Witnesses claim that Gallo was walking along Massachusetts Avenue at about 11:30pm. Saturday night when a car, turning into the gasoline station, nearly hit Gallo. Gallo allegedly kicked the car in the right fender, shouted, and gestured before the driver of the car came out and hit Gallo in the mouth, according to a witness and McClosky. Gallo could not be reached for comment. Gallo was taken to the MIT Infirmary by Campus Police, at which point a member of the Off-Hours Clinic staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join." Gallo was taken to Mount Auburn Hospital later the same day. Thereafter, the car did not deter the police. One of the medical staff described the wound as a "cone-and-a-half centimeter gaping laceration ... on the right side of the mouth where the upper and lower lips join."