Baker intruder to be tried

By Vanessa Cruz

Dunkin Elder, a Cambridge resident, will be tried tomorrow on charges of impersonating in Baker House on February 16 and stealing items from student’s rooms, according to Campus Police (CP) Sergeant Anne Glavin.

On the night of February 15, Baker House residents reported a suspicious person in the dormitory, said Baker Judicial Committee Chairman Jim Schumacher ’83. Later, a resident discovered his watch had been stolen. Baker residents searched the building, but they could not find the suspect, observed Schumacher.

The next morning, Baker’s night watchman saw a suspicious man on the first floor and called the Campus Police, according to Schumacher. At 7:15am CPs arrived at Baker House, but the person was no longer in the reported area, said Glavin. She noted that the CP officers searched the dormitory and stopped a man on the fifth floor. When asked for identification, Elder failed to provide any and claimed he was in the dormitory to see a student. The CP’s questioned the student, and the student denied knowing Elder. Elder was arrested for “trespassing in a penal building,” according to Glavin.

The CP officers searched Elder and found the stolen watch, a checkbook, and two checks. Later that day, said Glavin, the CPs found out that some students had lost their checks and checkbook but had failed to report the incident to the CP. Elder was then charged with “two accounts of larceny and receiving stolen property.”

No violence was involved in the incident, said Schumacher. According to Glavin, “If it were not for the cooperation of the students of the dormitory, the case would not have come up so smoothly.”
