MIT students join in DC

By Iven Font

Twenty-three thousand demonstrators rallied in Washington, DC last Saturday against US policy toward El Salvador.

The demonstrators protested US military aid to the Central American nation. They proceeded from Malcolm X Park down 16th Street to Lafayette Park, across the street from the White House, said participant Stephen A. Berenson.

Weizenbaum and other faculty members participated. Bill Hoffman G said about 100 MIT students join in.

The demonstrators protested against US policy toward El Salvador. "The situation is much more desperate now" than in May, said Berenson. "The coalition did not seem as unified as it could have been." The influence of the march "remains to be seen," he added.

President Reagan was at the White House during the demonstration, according to a White House press aide. The demonstrators played music and carried signs proclaiming, "Curb Your Dogma," "US Hands off El Salvador," and "We Need Jobs, Not War."

Berenson also expressed some disappointment because "the coalition did not seem as unified as it could have been." The influence of the march "remains to be seen," he added.
