The specter of global nuclear holocaust has haunted the earth for over three decades. Countless studies have examined theories and strategies of counterforce, certainty of deterrence, early warning, and limited nuclear war, with the inevitable result of heightening and widening the window of vulnerability. Meanwhile, Ronald Reagan, the current President of the United States, has continued the reckless, fruitless, and dangerous escalation of the nuclear arms race, seemingly oblivious to the possible consequences.

Politicians and many Americans have trouble comprehending the scope and degree of devastation that would accompany the explosion of even one large nuclear weapon on an American city. A one-megaton weapon groundout on Beacon Hill would kill half a million people within days and flatten most of the metropolitan area — including MIT, No. More Lowell. 800,000 people would lose their homes. The ensuing radioactive cloud would contaminate almost all of New England, territory, killing and injuring hundreds of thousands more within weeks. The human suffering that would be caused by just one weapon is beyond the scope of the imagination. According to Physicians for Social Responsi-

The American people are X

The freeze proposal has brought the nuclear arms race to the forefront of political discus-

The freeze proposal has denounced the freeze movement, but he soon will have to rejoin with its power.

The American people are sending a message to our political leaders: that there are no alternatives to the freeze movement, and that it is led by average Americans, not so-called radicals.

The freeze proposal has denounced the freeze movement, but he soon will have to rejoin with its power.

The American people are sending a message to our political leaders: that there are no alternatives to the freeze movement, and that it is led by average Americans, not so-called radicals.

The freeze proposal has denounced the freeze movement, but he soon will have to rejoin with its power.

The American people are sending a message to our political leaders: that there are no alternatives to the freeze movement, and that it is led by average Americans, not so-called radicals.

The freeze proposal has denounced the freeze movement, but he soon will have to rejoin with its power.

The American people are sending a message to our political leaders: that there are no alternatives to the freeze movement, and that it is led by average Americans, not so-called radicals.