The Corporation Visiting Committee on Student Affairs will convene Sunday and meet for three days to review student activities. In its report to the Visiting Committee, the Office of the Dean for Student Affairs presents the 1983 ODSA (ODSA) outlines its rational for merging the Residence Programs and the Student Activities sections and gives an analysis of the effectiveness of student activities at MIT.

The ODSA report names financial pressures as the main reason for the merger. The Office of the Dean for Student Affairs reports that the cost of running the Residence Programs has increased significantly, and that it is necessary to merge them with the Student Activities sections.

Specifically addressing the role of the Undergraduate Associate President (UDP), the report states, "There is a need for the UDP to step up to the plate and play the role of the UDP." The lack of any integration of the UDP's role into the role of the ODSA is a concern.

The ODSA proposes, in the report, the creation of a new group to address the problems of the student activities. "It is clear from our meetings that if the concept of self-governance for student organizations is to work, new forums must be created," the report states. The group recommended by the ODSA is a "student forum".

The report notes the lack of power of the undergraduate student government. "At the time of the election," the report states, "many institutions in society were being questioned, the validity and efficiency of our institutions were challenged... At MIT, many students were once affiliated with the undergraduate government, grew to distrust its ability to represent the students.
