THIS COULD BE THE START OF SOMETHING BIG

It could be your big chance for a scholarship that pays you $100 a month, plus tuition, books and lab fees. If you want to devote a part of your college curriculum to electronics and laboratory training in leadership, management, Air Force history and traditions ... and you can qualify, it could be for you.

Air Force ROTC leads to an Air Force officer's commission. And that means responsibility, challenge, service to your country. It means taking on big responsibility.

Lock into the Air Force ROTC program at your campus. Check out the benefits of an Air Force ROTC scholarship. It could be the start of something big ... it could be the start of a lasting relationship with the United States Air Force in dedicated service to your country.

The Burns' Office has announced that beginning with Spring Term 1983, students with outstanding balances from prior terms will not be able to register for a new term unless arrangements for payment have been made. Under the new procedure, the office will send the Registrar a list of all students with past due balances about two weeks before Registration Day, and also send a warning letter to students. The Registrar will withhold the registration materials of students whose names appear on this list and notify their advisors. When the student has resolved his obligations with the Burns' Office, he will receive the registration materials. Students who have questions about their account should contact their Account Representatives in the Burns' Office.

The Civil Engineering Department will continue its UROP Scholarship program in the coming spring semester with the offering of ten traineeships of $600 each. Traineeship applicants will be selected on the basis of a UROP project proposal competition. Each proposal is developed in consultation with a Civil Engineering faculty or research staff member. Five awards will be reserved for freshmen. The deadline for proposals will be January 28.

Interested students should contact the Civil Engineering Undergraduate Center (1-143, 34-B11) or Prof. Hambly (44-419, 3-1637) for more information.

The Student Telethon is coming February 15-16. Help is needed now to recruit callers from dorms, fraternities or off-campus. If you'd like to help, call Rhonda Peak at 3-2331, or drop a note to room 10-156. If you live in a dorm, you can call Sue Berg, dormitory coordinator, at 3-7284.
