MIT should help nonregistrants

Indeed, for the moment, any further prosecutions are unlikely, because both the government's predictions and the registration program itself have been ruled invalid in court. In the case of David Wayne, it was argued the government's enforcement strategies under the first Amendment rights to free speech, since only those who spoke out in favor of prosecution; further, the defense argued oficials outside the Department of Justice Department had set proterlectual policy for political ends and said this was an improper abuse of the legal system.

Judge Terry Hatter found for the defendant in a May 7 page opinion, he found that officials involved in prosecutorial decisions did not only Justice Department personnel, but top White House asylum

If current candidates are not

The Tech should help nonregistrants

To the Editor:

After an open forum held Sun-

March 6, the MIT Black Students' Union and La Union Chicana por Aztlan endorsed the follow-ling candidates for Undergraduate Association president and vice president:

1) Shiva Ayyadurai/Kyung Kol

2) Michael Witt/Inge Gedo

We call on all members to vote for cooperative student government and an effective voice in the administration.

To denounce all candidates on the platform in the eyes of the students, we demand candidates to continue to provide student information Processing Board if he cares about it. We have not heard of any one who surely would be a much-needed revision in the

Our foremost goal, to establish credibility for student government in the eyes of the students, is now going to be more difficult to achieve. The opinion of The Tech was hardly the voice of confidence we need and feel we deserve.

Witt and Gedo are running together for the offices of Undergraduate Association president and vice president.

To the Editor:

Ayyadurai's platform absurd

To the Editor:

I was amazed that Undergraduate Student Association president and vice presidential running mates (Shiva) Ayyadurai and (Kyung) Kol) would embrace the absurdities of their platform in the last issue of The Tech [Feedback, March 1], prior to the election. Their opening statement is typical; they would be centralizing the powers available in the hands of the entire student body. Because of our apathy? Certainly a redistribution of control will not significantly alter the activities people choose to participate in. The only probable outcome would be a reduction in student participation in organizations whose autonomy is removed by a senate unsympathetic to their needs. Thus, I find it difficult to imagine the entire student body benefiting from Ayyadurai and Kol's election.

On election day, students angered by the bloatedness of the past administration should be cau-sious not to vote for the candidates who most vehemently oppose the present undergraduate government, but only those whose platform reflects a better undergraduate life in a significant manner. Candidates who present only half-baked solutions to important issues do not fall into the latter category.
