Ensuring representation is student members’ role

The Undergraduate Association Nominations Committee, in an attempt to improve communication between students serving on committees and the wider student body, is keenly interested in being notified of any positions that need to be filled and to ensure that representatives are selected through an open and fair process. The Committee recognizes that students play a crucial role in the decision-making process. Administrators and faculty members look to the students serving on their committees to represent the opinion of "the undergraduates," a group rarely unified in its opinions. Some mechanism is clearly needed to ensure those chosen to represent indeed do so.

Student representatives to committees should be selected by the elected representatives of the students. Policies and positions must be considered and decided by the undergraduate student body, and legislation requires that students receive the opinions of "the undergraduates." The opinion of the undergraduates must be considered, and their representation is crucial. The Committee recognizes the importance of alternate and minority viewpoints. It is the responsibility of both the nominating committees and the general student body to ensure that all viewpoints are heard and that the opinions of "the undergraduates" are represented.

The candidates must be aware of the need for representation that reflects the diversity of the student body. The Committee encourages student representatives to consider the perspectives and interests of all students when selecting candidates. The commitment to representation must include consideration of the interests of those students who are often marginalized or underrepresented. The Committee aims to ensure that the nominating process is inclusive and that the final representatives truly reflect the needs and desires of the student body.

The Committee is committed to ensuring that the nominating procedures are transparent and that the selection of representatives is fair. It is the responsibility of the nominating committees to follow these guidelines in selecting representatives. The Committee recognizes the importance of the nominating process and is committed to ensuring that the final representatives truly reflect the needs and desires of the student body.
