Leader speak to Gray on benefit fee

By Burt S. Kaliski

Undergraduate Association President Michael P. Witt '84 and leaders of two other student organizations met with MIT President Paul E. Gray '49 yesterday to discuss the effect of the employee benefit fee on student activities.

"I don't know if I could convince Gray to waive the requirement," Witt said. "He does seem to sincerely want to work things out, but he's not discouraging, but he's not coming right out and saying this is no longer a valid requirement." Galagher said.

Witt told the Student Center Committee that the fee "is already in violation of the regulations of the Department of Education, and the proceeds from my [Guaranteed Student Loan or Parent Loans for Undergraduate Students] are required by law to pay the benefit fee, Witt specified.

Those groups include the Student Center Committee, the Undergraduate Financing Board, the Freshman House, and the Student Center Committee, which controls the department's budget.

In his meeting with the Student Center Committee, Gray "was not discouraging, but he was not going to say that he was going to remove the fee," Witt said. "For now, the thing to do is to try to get a hold of those groups that are required to pay the fee, Gray, and tell them not to pay it.

Gray also told the Student Center Committee that the fee is "not something that the Office of Education allows a three-month grace period, he said, but pay students through the Student Center.

"I don't know if I could convince Gray to waive the requirement," Witt said. "He does seem to sincerely want to work things out, but he's not discouraging, but he's not coming right out and saying this is no longer a valid requirement." Galagher said.

Witt told the Student Center Committee that the fee "is already in violation of the regulations of the Department of Education, and the proceeds from my [Guaranteed Student Loan or Parent Loans for Undergraduate Students] are required by law to pay the benefit fee, Witt specified.

Those groups include the Student Center Committee, the Undergraduate Financing Board, the Freshman House, and the Student Center Committee, which controls the department's budget.

In his meeting with the Student Center Committee, Gray "was not discouraging, but he was not going to say that he was going to remove the fee," Witt said. "For now, the thing to do is to try to get a hold of those groups that are required to pay the fee, Gray, and tell them not to pay it.

Gray also told the Student Center Committee that the fee is "not something that the Office of Education allows a three-month grace period, he said, but pay students through the Student Center.

"I don't know if I could convince Gray to waive the requirement," Witt said. "He does seem to sincerely want to work things out, but he's not discouraging, but he's not coming right out and saying this is no longer a valid requirement." Galagher said.

Witt told the Student Center Committee that the fee "is already in violation of the regulations of the Department of Education, and the proceeds from my [Guaranteed Student Loan or Parent Loans for Undergraduate Students] are required by law to pay the benefit fee, Witt specified.

Those groups include the Student Center Committee, the Undergraduate Financing Board, the Freshman House, and the Student Center Committee, which controls the department's budget.

In his meeting with the Student Center Committee, Gray "was not discouraging, but he was not going to say that he was going to remove the fee," Witt said. "For now, the thing to do is to try to get a hold of those groups that are required to pay the fee, Gray, and tell them not to pay it.

Gray also told the Student Center Committee that the fee is "not something that the Office of Education allows a three-month grace period, he said, but pay students through the Student Center.

"I don't know if I could convince Gray to waive the requirement," Witt said. "He does seem to sincerely want to work things out, but he's not discouraging, but he's not coming right out and saying this is no longer a valid requirement." Galagher said.

Witt told the Student Center Committee that the fee "is already in violation of the regulations of the Department of Education, and the proceeds from my [Guaranteed Student Loan or Parent Loans for Undergraduate Students] are required by law to pay the benefit fee, Witt specified.

Those groups include the Student Center Committee, the Undergraduate Financing Board, the Freshman House, and the Student Center Committee, which controls the department's budget.

In his meeting with the Student Center Committee, Gray "was not discouraging, but he was not going to say that he was going to remove the fee," Witt said. "For now, the thing to do is to try to get a hold of those groups that are required to pay the fee, Gray, and tell them not to pay it.

Gray also told the Student Center Committee that the fee is "not something that the Office of Education allows a three-month grace period, he said, but pay students through the Student Center.

"I don't know if I could convince Gray to waive the requirement," Witt said. "He does seem to sincerely want to work things out, but he's not discouraging, but he's not coming right out and saying this is no longer a valid requirement." Galagher said.

Witt told the Student Center Committee that the fee "is already in violation of the regulations of the Department of Education, and the proceeds from my [Guaranteed Student Loan or Parent Loans for Undergraduate Students] are required by law to pay the benefit fee, Witt specified.

Those groups include the Student Center Committee, the Undergraduate Financing Board, the Freshman House, and the Student Center Committee, which controls the department's budget.

In his meeting with the Student Center Committee, Gray "was not discouraging, but he was not going to say that he was going to remove the fee," Witt said. "For now, the thing to do is to try to get a hold of those groups that are required to pay the fee, Gray, and tell them not to pay it.

Gray also told the Student Center Committee that the fee is "not something that the Office of Education allows a three-month grace period, he said, but pay students through the Student Center.

"I don't know if I could convince Gray to waive the requirement," Witt said. "He does seem to sincerely want to work things out, but he's not discouraging, but he's not coming right out and saying this is no longer a valid requirement." Galagher said.

Witt told the Student Center Committee that the fee "is already in violation of the regulations of the Department of Education, and the proceeds from my [Guaranteed Student Loan or Parent Loans for Undergraduate Students] are required by law to pay the benefit fee, Witt specified.

Those groups include the Student Center Committee, the Undergraduate Financing Board, the Freshman House, and the Student Center Committee, which controls the department's budget.

In his meeting with the Student Center Committee, Gray "was not discouraging, but he was not going to say that he was going to remove the fee," Witt said. "For now, the thing to do is to try to get a hold of those groups that are required to pay the fee, Gray, and tell them not to pay it.

Gray also told the Student Center Committee that the fee is "not something that the Office of Education allows a three-month grace period, he said, but pay students through the Student Center.

"I don't know if I could convince Gray to waive the requirement," Witt said. "He does seem to sincerely want to work things out, but he's not discouraging, but he's not coming right out and saying this is no longer a valid requirement." Galagher said.