To the Editor:

I was appalled to read that Corporation Chairman David S. Saxon ’41 expressed his support for compulsory national youth service. Apparently Saxon believes that involuntary servitude, otherwise known as slavery, should exist in this society. Saxon is using his position to promote the belief that each individual is owned by society. As MIT corporation chairman, Saxon represents a great threat to individual rights in this country. I must therefore demand Saxon’s resignation. Slavery and its proponents have no place in a free society. If Saxon’s belief in involuntary servitude is sincere, he can go to one of the many countries whose governments share his ideas. I am sure that most of them would welcome him.

Do not reveal movie plot

To the Editor:

Your recent movie review by Drew Blakeman of _The Dead Zone_ (Oct. 25) was a real spoiler. When I start reading a review, I expect a certain amount of background, to get me interested in the movie. I do not expect to read a complete synopsis of the plot, especially of a suspense film. It really spoils a lot of the movie to be told that the hero is killed at the end.

A movie reviewer has a difficult job of discussing a movie that the reader has probably not seen, without revealing too much. Mr. Blakeman revealed far too much.
