Terms of Endearment, starring Debra Winger, Shirley MacLaine, and Jack Nicholson; directed by James L. Brooks; screenplay by James L. Brooks; based on novel by Lamont Markham. A New Line Cinema release, now playing at the Sack Cinemas.

Terry offers Emma a drink, and the two talk about a young Aurora Greenway, apparently played by Shirley MacLaine, who appears to be involved with her emotions.

Aurora's nonchalant attitude about her husband's death is surprising and contrary to her mother's total control and need for possession.

Aurora is not a typical mother. Her parents were constantly bickering and trying to find happiness. It is a definite tearjerker that will make male chauvinists wince.

Seniors! Free Subs!

Free Meeting, Wednesday

Are you hungry? How would you like to help us devour 40 pounds of sliced meat, 15 pounds of vegetables, 15 pounds of sauce, 200 onions, lettuce, tomatoes, and condiments on 1300 submarine rolls?

Well, you'll have to be a Senior, and you'll have to wait until tomorrow, when the Fraternal Council of your cord in a series of end-of-month study breaks. This month will be held in the Mezzanine Lounge and on the third floor of the Student Center.

See you there!

Tool and Die

Anyone wishing to submit humorous articles, cartoons, etc. should do so before Dec. 1983. Either send your submissions to one of the weekly meetings (Tuesdays, 5 p.m., Room 4100 of the Student Center) or send interdepartmentally to: Tool and Die Magazine, room 4100.
