Opinion

Hailing down fear

(Continued from page 4)

afraid, not just of little things like meetings lurking in the alley, but of big things like nuclear war and not living past the age of 20. Some of my friends actually got mugged, although none of them died in a nuclear holocaust. More and more movies began appearing which dealt with the subject of nuclear war. It seems that we are now racing toward some type of nuclear confrontation.

It is Reagan's continual emphasis on the "Communist Threat" and the need to defend ourselves which has fed to this state of affairs. His low regard for human life has somehow trickled down from us, lowering our opinions of ourselves and our fellow man.

Likewise, recent fear of nuclear war has been sparked by in- terconnection which cannot be ignored. With this in mind, it is important to examine the facts about each candidate, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Unfortunately, it is not at all clear how to evaluate a candi- date, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fection his or her performance as president.

It seems egotistical for we Americans to think, but we must elect the next president on the basis of how only of how good he or she will be for the world. With this in mind, it is important to examine the facts about each candidate, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Unfortunately, it is not at all clear how to evaluate a candi- date, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Making nuclear war was far more probable.

We must elect the next president on the basis of how only of how good he or she will be for the world. With this in mind, it is important to examine the facts about each candidate, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Unfortunately, it is not at all clear how to evaluate a candi- date, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Opinion Hailing down fear

(Continued from page 4)

afraid, not just of little things like meetings lurking in the alley, but of big things like nuclear war and not living past the age of 20. Some of my friends actually got mugged, although none of them died in a nuclear holocaust. More and more movies began appearing which dealt with the subject of nuclear war. It seems that we are now racing toward some type of nuclear confrontation.

It is Reagan's continual emphasis on the "Communist Threat" and the need to defend ourselves which has fed to this state of affairs. His low regard for human life has somehow trickled down from us, lowering our opinions of ourselves and our fellow man.

Likewise, recent fear of nuclear war has been sparked by in- terconnection which cannot be ignored. With this in mind, it is important to examine the facts about each candidate, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Unfortunately, it is not at all clear how to evaluate a candi- date, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Making nuclear war was far more probable.

It seems egotistical for we Americans to think, but we must elect the next president on the basis of how only of how good he or she will be for the world. With this in mind, it is important to examine the facts about each candidate, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Unfortunately, it is not at all clear how to evaluate a candi- date, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Opinion Hailing down fear

(Continued from page 4)

afraid, not just of little things like meetings lurking in the alley, but of big things like nuclear war and not living past the age of 20. Some of my friends actually got mugged, although none of them died in a nuclear holocaust. More and more movies began appearing which dealt with the subject of nuclear war. It seems that we are now racing toward some type of nuclear confrontation.

It is Reagan's continual emphasis on the "Communist Threat" and the need to defend ourselves which has fed to this state of affairs. His low regard for human life has somehow trickled down from us, lowering our opinions of ourselves and our fellow man.

Likewise, recent fear of nuclear war has been sparked by in- terconnection which cannot be ignored. With this in mind, it is important to examine the facts about each candidate, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Unfortunately, it is not at all clear how to evaluate a candi- date, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Making nuclear war was far more probable.

It seems egotistical for we Americans to think, but we must elect the next president on the basis of how only of how good he or she will be for the world. With this in mind, it is important to examine the facts about each candidate, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Unfortunately, it is not at all clear how to evaluate a candi- date, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Making nuclear war was far more probable.

It seems egotistical for we Americans to think, but we must elect the next president on the basis of how only of how good he or she will be for the world. With this in mind, it is important to examine the facts about each candidate, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Unfortunately, it is not at all clear how to evaluate a candi- date, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Making nuclear war was far more probable.

It seems egotistical for we Americans to think, but we must elect the next president on the basis of how only of how good he or she will be for the world. With this in mind, it is important to examine the facts about each candidate, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.

Unfortunately, it is not at all clear how to evaluate a candi- date, rather than listen to campaign rhetoric. A candidate's policies once in office depends not only on the kind of person he or she is, but also on the sort of deals he or she had to cut to get elected. Any president's true cit- ies will eventually come out, but the chains in which he or she binds himself - the campaign deals - will unquestionably af- fect his or her performance as president.