Sooner Or Later
You'll Get Responsibility Like This.
In The Navy It's Sooner.

You're maneuvering 445 feet of guided missile frigate through the hazards and non-stop traffic of one of the world's busiest ports. You're doing it safely. Because you know your equipment. You know your men. And even when the responsibility weighs in at 5,600 tons... you're ready.

After four years of college, you're ready for more responsibility than most civilian jobs offer. Navy officers get the kind of job and responsibility they want, and they get it sooner.

Navy officers are part of the management team after 16 weeks. Instead of boot camp, officer candidates receive four months of leadership training. It's professional schooling designed to sharpen their technical and management skills.

Then, in their first assignment, Navy officers get management experience that could take years in private industry. And they earn the decision-making authority it takes to make that responsibility pay off.

As their management abilities grow, Navy officers can take advantage of advanced education and training in fields as varied as operations management, electronics, and systems analysis. In graduate school it would cost you thousands; in the Navy we pay you. And the Navy pays well. The starting salary is $17,000 (more than most companies pay). And that's on top of a comprehensive benefits program that includes special duty pay. After four years, with regular promotions and pay increases, the salary is up to as much as $81,000.

If you qualify to be an officer in the Navy, chances are you have what it takes to succeed. The Navy just makes it happen faster.
