Number of sophomores in EECS is down from last year

The EECS department has tried to alleviate the problem by bringing in more visiting faculty and people from outside department, as well as remote campuses, but "the notion of the department growing to meet the demand won't work," Smith said. The department has neither the capital nor the space to expand. "Besides, we don't want MIT to become the Massachusetts Institute of Electrical Engineers," he said.

"I don't see MIT going to a dry rush next year," Scheidler said. "However, with the new drinking age, some changes will be necessary. A division of the alcohol committee, "The faculty is being worn out and is feeling restricted by having to deal with so many students," Arthur C. Smith said.

"We are going one step at a time. We are going one step at a time. We don't know where to go if they do reject us," said Smith. "We are going one step at a time. We don't know where to go if they do reject us," said Smith.

New drinking age may affect policy; a dry rush is possible

The current Dean's Office policy does not impose regulations on fraternity use of alcohol, according to William T. Maimone, who said: "We are trying to alleviate the problem by bringing in more visiting faculty and people from outside department, as well as remote campuses, but "the notion of the department growing to meet the demand won't work," Smith said. The department has neither the capital nor the space to expand. "Besides, we don't want MIT to become the Massachusetts Institute of Electrical Engineers," he said.

The current Dean's Office policy does not impose regulations on fraternity use of alcohol, according to William T. Maimone, who said: "We are trying to alleviate the problem by bringing in more visiting faculty and people from outside department, as well as remote campuses, but "the notion of the department growing to meet the demand won't work," Smith said. The department has neither the capital nor the space to expand. "Besides, we don't want MIT to become the Massachusetts Institute of Electrical Engineers," he said.

Women, an advisory group to the Office of the Dean for Student Affairs, meets, an advisory group to the Office of the Dean for Student Affairs. MIT may impose stricter measures for campus events where alcohol is served, she said. One possibility is the use of wristbands, which cannot be removed at parties, for marking those of drinking age.

"The Junior-Senior Prom may no longer exist in the years to come," Scheidler said. "Now students go for drinking and the band. It ought to be changed so that students who can't drink won't feel left out."

Dormitory Council Chairman David C. Sherman, also a member of the alcohol committee, said: "Now students go for drinking and the band. It ought to be changed so that students who can't drink won't feel left out."

The Junior-Senior Prom may no longer exist in the years to come," Scheidler said. "Now students go for drinking and the band. It ought to be changed so that students who can't drink won't feel left out."

"The Junior-Senior Prom may no longer exist in the years to come," Scheidler said. "Now students go for drinking and the band. It ought to be changed so that students who can't drink won't feel left out."

Kearfott brings the future into focus.

Navigation and guidance systems, real-time digital and analog communications, data integration, signal processing, inertial sensor assemblies, work on these complex assignments involves work on these complex assignments involves work on these complex assignments involves work on these complex assignments.