MIT frats increase contact with neighbors in Back Bay

(Continued from page 1) keep things informal among parties, Schmauch said, explaining that parties which spread outside the house can cause problems. "If we get a call, the first thing we do is call Dan Schmauch," explained Sherwood. "Usually the neighbor's complaint is handled by the fraternity itself."

Graduate and women's issues are discussed

(Continued from page 1) there. We feel it helps them meet new people, such as dormitory governments, according to the ODIA. They end up joining a "narrower band" of activities than If MIT students. They w*ould be treated differently than if they had said College. They end up joining a ernments, according to the issues are discussed

"narrower band" of activities by the fraternity itself."