MIT volleyball goes to NCAA final four

By Paul Paterowski

"It was one of the all-time greatest sport wins in MIT history," said Coaches Information Director Ken Cerroni describing the women's volleyball team's victory over number-one ranked Juniata in the quarterfinals of the NCAA Division III championships this past weekend.

This best-of-five contest went down to the wire. The Engineers defeated Juniata (15-8, 15-4, 15-13) on the up-ranked team's home court. MIT had been ranked 7th going into the match.

This marks the second straight year that MIT has made it to the final four. By virtue of their latest victory, the squad can now be recognized as the best team in the East.

This Friday the night the Engineers will be at Elihu, Elihu. Elihu to point to the reasons that they are more than just the best team in the East. The squad will face Calvin College (26-7) from Michigan. Calvin upset the University of North Carolina at Greensboro 3-1 in advance to the semifinal.

One could summarize the Engineers' victory in two words: Lori Cantu. The 5' 8" senior from San Antonio, Texas was the dominant force on the floor. "Everything the hit, scored," said Coach Karyn Altman describing Cantu's performance.

The women's basketball team is in Greensboro 3-1 to advance to the national championships this past weekendend to prove to the nation that MIT is capable of, more than just the best team in the East.

The Engineers took the lead to only one point. With points to close the Engineers'

The second half proceeded in

The Engineers took the lead

The Engineers took the lead

The Engineers took the lead

...