Amherst Alley: improvements, but maybe not worth the price

Every time I walked past the ruins of Amherst Alley since September, I spoke more and more about the project. It was a huge area that needed to be improved. But the people involved in the project never seemed to understand the problem.

The alley was a disaster area. It was on the opposite shore of the river. There was nothing to see. The only thing that was nice was the waterway. It was a beautiful place to be.

The project started in the fall of 1986. The city council made a decision to improve the alley. The construction started in the spring of 1987. The workers were so busy that they didn't notice the people who were watching.

The workers started to build a bridge. They were so busy that they didn't notice the people who were watching. The bridge was supposed to be finished in time for the fall of 1987. But it was never finished. The workers left the site and never came back.

The people who lived near the alley were so angry that they started to protest. They wanted the project to be finished. They wanted to see the improvements that were promised.
