FACULTY, students, and alumni gathered yesterday at the annual MIT Awards Convocation for the presentation of MIT's highest honors to outstanding members of the MIT community.

Michelle A. White, an associate professor of Electrical Engineering and Computer Science, was one of the winners of the MIT Faculty Service Award for her efforts to make the MIT community "a truly international university." White was recognized for her work as the Dean's Office's liaison to the transportation faculty, staff, and students, and as the director of the Transportation Systems Unit, which she established in 1980.

Also honored was John P. Camerer, a professor in the Department of Economics, who was presented with the MIT Faculty Merit Award for his contributions to the medical sciences. Camerer was recognized for his work in the areas of behavioral economics and decision making.

Another winner was Jack S. C. Lee, a professor in the Department of Electrical Engineering and Computer Science, who was presented with the MIT Faculty Merit Award for his contributions to the field of computer science. Lee was recognized for his work in the areas of artificial intelligence and computer vision.

Also honored was Richard A. Taplin, a professor in the Department of Mechanical Engineering, who was presented with the MIT Faculty Merit Award for his contributions to the field of mechanical engineering. Taplin was recognized for his work in the areas of design and manufacturing.

The MIT Faculty Merit Award was also presented to two other faculty members, John W. Tukey, a professor in the Department of Mathematics, and Edward L. Tufte, a professor in the Department of Political Science, for their contributions to the MIT community.
