Editorial

Do not find Bexley guilty on rumors

Bexley Hall was the first choice for fewer freshmen than any other dormitory this fall. The dormitory has received a reputation — perhaps undeserved — for deliberately causing this poor showing. My administration officials have alleged anti-rush incidents at Bexley. Housemaster Judah Schwartz, however, does not believe the incidents constitute violations of Institute rules. No one has been charged with any infraction.

The Committee on Discipline should investigate the charges against Bexley made by the Department of Students and present its findings. While at this time we would also do well to investigate whether Bexley has been slandered by members of other living groups. How many of the students who refused to live in Bexley Hall this fall? Only 70 of the over 1,100 members of the Class of 1989 visited Bexley during Residence/Orientation Week, according to Schwartz. If individual residents of Bexley Hall have violated the Institute's policy on harassment, they should be found and held accountable. Until anyone has been held accountable, the committee would also do well to investigate the alleged violations. That office, and Sherwood in particular, have been faced with an unusually high number of complaints.

The dormitory received a reputation — perhaps undeserved — for deliberate causing this poor showing. My administration officials have alleged anti-rush incidents at Bexley. Housemaster Judah Schwartz, however, does not believe the incidents constitute violations of Institute rules. No one has been charged with any infraction.

The Committee on Discipline should investigate the charges against Bexley made by the Department of Students and present its findings. While at this time we would also do well to investigate whether Bexley has been slandered by members of other living groups. How many of the students who refused to live in Bexley Hall this fall? Only 70 of the over 1,100 members of the Class of 1989 visited Bexley during Residence/Orientation Week, according to Schwartz. If individual residents of Bexley Hall have violated the Institute's policy on harassment, they should be found and held accountable. Until anyone has been held accountable, the committee would also do well to investigate the alleged violations. That office, and Sherwood in particular, have been faced with an unusually high number of complaints.

Guest Column/John Harbison

Can We, too, be the world?

Statement and Counterstatement: IA. The July Live-Aid concert was the greatest day in the history of music. (ABC-TV)

IA. The history of music was the day Bach hounded out the parts for the Matthew Passion.

2A. Bob Geldof, member of Live-Aid, was not surprised by the success of the concert. (USA Today)

2A. 'Live-Aid was great, probably the greatest. The best. No infractions have been proven to have occurred. No one has been charged with any infraction.

The Committee on Discipline should investigate the charges against Bexley made by the Department of Students and present its findings. While at this time we would also do well to investigate whether Bexley has been slandered by members of other living groups. How many of the students who refused to live in Bexley Hall this fall? Only 70 of the over 1,100 members of the Class of 1989 visited Bexley during Residence/Orientation Week, according to Schwartz. If individual residents of Bexley Hall have violated the Institute's policy on harassment, they should be found and held accountable. Until anyone has been held accountable, the committee would also do well to investigate the alleged violations. That office, and Sherwood in particular, have been faced with an unusually high number of complaints.

The dormitory received a reputation — perhaps undeserved — for deliberate causing this poor showing. My administration officials have alleged anti-rush incidents at Bexley. Housemaster Judah Schwartz, however, does not believe the incidents constitute violations of Institute rules. No one has been charged with any infraction.

The Committee on Discipline should investigate the charges against Bexley made by the Department of Students and present its findings. While at this time we would also do well to investigate whether Bexley has been slandered by members of other living groups. How many of the students who refused to live in Bexley Hall this fall? Only 70 of the over 1,100 members of the Class of 1989 visited Bexley during Residence/Orientation Week, according to Schwartz. If individual residents of Bexley Hall have violated the Institute's policy on harassment, they should be found and held accountable. Until anyone has been held accountable, the committee would also do well to investigate the alleged violations. That office, and Sherwood in particular, have been faced with an unusually high number of complaints.

The dormitory received a reputation — perhaps undeserved — for deliberate causing this poor showing. My administration officials have alleged anti-rush incidents at Bexley. Housemaster Judah Schwartz, however, does not believe the incidents constitute violations of Institute rules. No one has been charged with any infraction.

The Committee on Discipline should investigate the charges against Bexley made by the Department of Students and present its findings. While at this time we would also do well to investigate whether Bexley has been slandered by members of other living groups. How many of the students who refused to live in Bexley Hall this fall? Only 70 of the over 1,100 members of the Class of 1989 visited Bexley during Residence/Orientation Week, according to Schwartz. If individual residents of Bexley Hall have violated the Institute's policy on harassment, they should be found and held accountable. Until anyone has been held accountable, the committee would also do well to investigate the alleged violations. That office, and Sherwood in particular, have been faced with an unusually high number of complaints.