To the Editor:

The United Fruit Company's decision to put up virtually no armed resistance to the CIA's overthrow of that in 1954, after eight years of military rule that has murdered at least seventy-thousand civilians — and the people are still malnourished.

The CIA threat to the United States was its demonstration that a socialist president could legitimately be elected president. Kennedy was particularly worried that European countries such as Italy might be as impressed by Chiles's example they themselves would succumb to this threat of democracy. The only choice was to use the CIA to so deftly manipulate the situation that when the military finally struck, with tacit US approval, it replaced decades of parliamentary democracy with a totalitarian military dictatorship that whitewashed the freedom and respect for human rights that existed under the Soviet-backed governments. To complete this sampler of CIA activities (only a fraction of their many tricks around the world, we come to Nicaragua.
