A holds meetings on apartheid, divestment

(Continued from page 11)

The topic was pay taxes in South Africa, said one student. An-other way was to make the cost of doing business in South Africa mean the profit.

Moser was also an expression of "economic solidarity." while the South African government, said Con-tractor, "a number of South African government re-plied, "companies are in South Africa, they pay taxes and we get government," another student said. Af-ricans assert that it was "saying something to Paul Ghet" for a long time ago, but agreed with the theme of student pressure.

Several students criticized the Sullivan principles, a set of policies for companies doing business in South Africa. A study of people believe that it is "good foreign policy for foreign." said one student. The Sullivan principles when companies are in South Africa, they pay taxes and that is "good government." another student said that the Afri-Cans assert that it was "saying something to Paul Ghet" for a long time ago, but agreed with the theme of student pressure.

Several students criticized the Sullivan principles, a set of policies for companies doing business in South Africa. A study of people believe that it is "good foreign policy for foreign." said one student. The Sullivan principles when companies are in South Africa, they pay taxes and that is "good government." another student said that the Afri-Cans assert that it was "saying something to Paul Ghet" for a long time ago, but agreed with the theme of student pressure.

Several students criticized the Sullivan principles, a set of policies for companies doing business in South Africa. A study of people believe that it is "good foreign policy for foreign." said one student. The Sullivan principles when companies are in South Africa, they pay taxes and that is "good government." another student said that the Afri-Cans assert that it was "saying something to Paul Ghet" for a long time ago, but agreed with the theme of student pressure.

Several students criticized the Sullivan principles, a set of policies for companies doing business in South Africa. A study of people believe that it is "good foreign policy for foreign." said one student. The Sullivan principles when companies are in South Africa, they pay taxes and that is "good government." another student said that the Afri-Cans assert that it was "saying something to Paul Ghet" for a long time ago, but agreed with the theme of student pressure.

Several students criticized the Sullivan principles, a set of policies for companies doing business in South Africa. A study of people believe that it is "good foreign policy for foreign." said one student. The Sullivan principles when companies are in South Africa, they pay taxes and that is "good government." another student said that the Afri-Cans assert that it was "saying something to Paul Ghet" for a long time ago, but agreed with the theme of student pressure.

Several students criticized the Sullivan principles, a set of policies for companies doing business in South Africa. A study of people believe that it is "good foreign policy for foreign." said one student. The Sullivan principles when companies are in South Africa, they pay taxes and that is "good government." another student said that the Afri-Cans assert that it was "saying something to Paul Ghet" for a long time ago, but agreed with the theme of student pressure.