US jets hit Libyan military targets; Congress backs retaliation for terrorism

Text of President Reagan's address

(Original note: The following is the text of President Reagan's address announcing the US missile strike on Libya after the Libyan leaders released the locations of five military targets on the Libyan mainland. The United States was evidently determined to fulfill its promise to respond to terrorist attacks, considering that 42 in 1986 alone. The new attack was the latest installment in a continuous series of measures to stem the tide of terrorism and military support to the Libyan regime. The attack was made in response to Libyan support for terrorism and its sponsorship of acts of terrorism against the United States and other countries.)

The evidence is now conclusive that the terrorist bomb attack on La Belle Discotheque in Beirut, which killed 24 Americans, was planned and executed as part of the direct orders of the Libyan regime. On March 23, at 7 pm Eastern Time, air naval forces of the United States hit the Al Azziziyah barracks in Tripoli, the Benina Military airfield and the Al Jumahiriya barracks. These three facilities are used for military training and for military purposes and are in the vicinity of the site of the terrorist attack. The fifth target was hit for military suppression purposes."
