"What is the use of a book," thought Alice, "without pictures or conversations?"

Lewis Carroll

"Human subtlety... will never devise an imitation more direct than does nature, because in her inventions nothing is lacking, and nothing is superfluous."

Leonardo da Vinci

Very rarely in the course of one day to day existence can one grab a slice of life and savour it slowly. With eyes cast down,

In the play's profoundly abstrichical frolic.

Granted, a certain attempt has been made to update the text, with insertions conversingly original and devastatingly funny. There was a reference to Mrs. Marnix, for instance, and the threatened group of elpanisms and blasts. And at last the hungry visitors to "make my day." Why was all this? Was it an attempt by Andrej Vajdja's scheduled guest-
