Poland accuses US diplomat of spying

Alfonso Paniagua, a US diplomat who left the country after a 23-day visit to Warsaw last weekend was a spy, Albert Muehler, a political officer at the embassy, is accused of gathering intelligence and information on the activities of Solidarity, the outlawed trade union.

Iran sentences American

An Iranian court reportedly has sentenced an American to 10 years in prison for spying. Iran’s news agency, Jan Patia, a communications engineer from Bethesda, Maryland, admitted being a member of the Central Intelligence Agency. Patia’s sister has criticized the Reagan Administration for not doing enough to free her brother, who was arrested last June.

Sri Lanka bombs Tamil strongholds

Government warplanes in Sri Lanka blasted Tamil strongholds in retaliation for Tuesday’s bombing that killed over 100 people in the capital. Military authorities say more than 100 were killed in the raid. The government also said at least 100 people were wounded in the raid.

Licensing board rejects proposal to shrink Seabrook safety zone

A federal licensing board rejected a proposal to shrink the Seabrook, New Hampshire, nuclear power plant’s evacuation zone from ten miles to one mile. The Atomic Safety and Licensing Board—a unit of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission—ruled unanimously that the evacuation zone could be reduced to one mile.

Licensing board rejects proposal to cut evacuation zone from ten miles to one mile. The ASLB said Seabrook owners have not shown that their request can be released in the event of a serious accident; and whether Seabrook has Blueprints for American facilities from the last ten years.

Imprisoned Soviet scientist wins appeal

A Supreme Court decision expanded the rights of the scientist who was put in prison for six years for writing a critical letter to a scientist in Moscow. The Court ruled unanimously that the scientist was not guilty of espionage. The ASLB said Seabrook owners have not shown that their request can be released in the event of a serious accident; and whether Seabrook has Blueprints for American facilities from the last ten years.

Supreme Court upholds Georgia death penalty law

The Supreme Court upheld the Georgia death penalty law in a 5-4 decision, ruled that death penalty laws may not be attacked as unconstitutional, even though statistics indicate they may have been applied in a racially biased manner. The Court dismissed that some of the laws may have been applied in a racially biased manner. The Court said that some of the laws may have been applied in a racially biased manner. Use Raid

Assistant Secretary of State Robert Lamb says that US officials have known about Soviet bugging of the US embassy in Moscow for seven years. Lamb told a House panel Wednesday that Americans were placed at risk by the Soviet bugging devices. Lamb said that it was hard to find and "neutralize" Soviet "bugs" in the walls of the compound. Florida Congressman Larry Smith accused the State Department of responsibility for letting foreign contractors work on embassy buildings with no having security clearances. Lamb says the Soviets may have blueprints for American facilities from the last ten years.

Anti-depressant drug finds use

An anti-depressant drug, Wellbutrin, has shown an unexpected side effect: it enhances sexual desire and performance. But the Burroughs Wellcome company, which makes the drug, says it isn't going to sell it for sex problems. Use of Wellbutrin as an anti-depressant is being re-evaluated because it caused some people to have seizures.

Eastern airlines says co-pilot’s window wasn’t open

CIA on-campus recruiting

A federal auditing board is investigating the CIA’s recruitment of students at UMass Amherst inside the administration building. But the ASLB did not rule out the possibility that zone reduction could be justified. The ASLB says Seabrook owners have not shown that their request can be released in the event of a serious accident; and whether Seabrook has Blueprints for American facilities from the last ten years.

Marine turns down immunity offer

A Marine Cpl. Arnold Bracy has reportedly refused an offer of immunity in exchange for testimony against an unidentified immunity to Poindexter to testify — assuring them that their actions weren't used against them. House investigators also discussed the case of Thomas Cline, who was reportedly involved in efforts to arm Nicaraguan rebels. Lawmakers shelved plans to seek limited immunity for Cline in return to a request from Walsh.

President Reagan has called for a new national security adviser, Admiral John Poindexter, to replace William Casey, who was dismissed last week.
