Students fear haste in amendment process

By NEIL DEJAE

The faculty may be put into an irreversible uproar of the humanities, art, and social science distribution proposal because of the momentum the proposal has acquired, Joseph J. Rosen G said at an open forum yesterday. "The people behind it . . . think of the measure as their baby," he said.

The forum, sponsored by the School of Humanities, Arts, and Social Science, was attended by students and ten faculty. Dean for Undergraduate Education Margaret A. Macar '65 urged students and faculty to make their opinions about the proposal known. "The people behind it . . . think of the measure as their baby," she said at an open forum yesterday. "The people behind it . . . think of the measure as their baby," she said.

The forum, sponsored by the School of Humanities, Arts, and Social Science, was attended by students and ten faculty. Dean for Undergraduate Education Margaret A. Macar '65 urged students and faculty to make their opinions about the proposal known. "The people behind it . . . think of the measure as their baby," she said at an open forum yesterday. "The people behind it . . . think of the measure as their baby," she said. The forum, sponsored by the School of Humanities, Arts, and Social Science, was attended by students and ten faculty. Dean for Undergraduate Education Margaret A. Macar '65 urged students and faculty to make their opinions about the proposal known. "The people behind it . . . think of the measure as their baby," she said at an open forum yesterday. "The people behind it . . . think of the measure as their baby," she said.

The forum, sponsored by the School of Humanities, Arts, and Social Science, was attended by students and ten faculty. Dean for Undergraduate Education Margaret A. Macar '65 urged students and faculty to make their opinions about the proposal known. "The people behind it . . . think of the measure as their baby," she said at an open forum yesterday. "The people behind it . . . think of the measure as their baby," she said.

The forum, sponsored by the School of Humanities, Arts, and Social Science, was attended by students and ten faculty. Dean for Undergraduate Education Margaret A. Macar '65 urged students and faculty to make their opinions about the proposal known. "The people behind it . . . think of the measure as their baby," she said at an open forum yesterday. "The people behind it . . . think of the measure as their baby," she said.