Fund drive aims for $550 million
(Continued from page 1)

In the past 25 years, MIT has increased its annual endowment to $550 million from $876,000. This $550 million represents a $24 million increase in annual income. The endowment is a key component of the university's financial health. The endowment provides a significant portion of the university's operating revenue, with the remainder coming from tuition, fees, and other sources. The endowment is used to support academic programs, faculty research, student scholarships, and other initiatives. The endowment is also used to support the university's long-term financial stability. The endowment is a key component of the university's financial health. The endowment provides a significant portion of the university's operating revenue, with the remainder coming from tuition, fees, and other sources. The endowment is used to support academic programs, faculty research, student scholarships, and other initiatives. The endowment is also used to support the university's long-term financial stability. The endowment is a key component of the university's financial health. The endowment provides a significant portion of the university's operating revenue, with the remainder coming from tuition, fees, and other sources. The endowment is used to support academic programs, faculty research, student scholarships, and other initiatives. The endowment is also used to support the university's long-term financial stability.

EECS raises stipends for doctoral students
(Continued from page 1)

The School of Engineering and Applied Sciences (EECS) has raised stipend packages for doctoral students. The raises, which range from $300 to $500 per month, are designed to attract and retain top students. The raises are being made possible by a recent increase in the school's endowment. The raises will be phased in over the next few years, with the goal of providing a stipend of $4,000 per month for all doctoral students by 1992.

Hike for TAs considered

The department is considering raising TA stipends in order to keep them competitive with other institutions. The current TA stipend is $3,000 per month, but is expected to increase to $4,000 per month in the near future. The raises will be made possible by a recent increase in the school's endowment. The raises will be phased in over the next few years, with the goal of providing a stipend of $4,000 per month for all doctoral students by 1992.

MBAs interested in financial management

If a company that has made over 50 strategic acquisitions valued at $1.8 billion in the last three years is your idea of a company with financial expertise...

If a company whose market value has increased fourfold over the last five years is your idea of a company with financial strength...

If a company that is the world's largest marketer of business information, publishing, and marketing services is your idea of a company you would like to join...

It's time to meet The Dun & Bradstreet Corporation

MBAs interested in financial management

If a company that has made over 50 strategic acquisitions valued at $1.8 billion in the last three years is your idea of a company with financial expertise...

If a company whose market value has increased fourfold over the last five years is your idea of a company with financial strength...

If a company that is the world's largest marketer of business information, publishing, and marketing services is your idea of a company you would like to join...

It's time to meet The Dun & Bradstreet Corporation

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1987 The Tech PAGE 17