All incumbents reelected to council

Cambridge need only constitute ten percent of the population in order to get at least one seat on the city council. All but a few of the cities that experimented with proportional representation dropped it.

David Sullivan, Walter Sullivan, and CCA incumbent Alice Wolf were elected in the first round, receiving 3066, 2802, and 2523 first-place votes respectively. CCA-backed Francis H. Duehay, Walsh, and Vellucci followed in that order.

The counting did not end until Saturday afternoon. Graham, independent Sheila Russell and independent Thomas Danehy took the final three positions on the council.
