MIT meets with homeless
By Michael Gajer
Multiple occurrences of the homeless "Tent City" group today will discuss a proposal for a group to move into a property on River Street offered rent-free by owner Alex Steinberg, according to Walter L. Milne, assistant to the chairman of the MIT Corporation.

Meanwhile, the homeless group is trying to finalize an arrangement to move into a property on River Street offered rent-free by owner Alex Steinberg, according to Walter L. Milne, assistant to the chairman of the MIT Corporation.

Khoury reconsiders total number of HASS-D's
By Salman Akhtar
The final number of subjects qualifying for Fall semester, Arts and Social Sciences Distribution status "could go as low as 50 or as high as 80," according to Philip Khoury, associate dean of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences.

Khoury said there was no pre-determined cap on the number of courses being granted HASS-D status, but the Humanities Distribution Overview Committee was mandated by the faculty to try and reduce the number of distribution subjects. As a result of HASS-D reform, the number of subjects with distribution status had fallen from 150 to 100 this semester, Khoury noted.

The changes in the HASS-D requirement came as a result of revised HASS-D guidelines approved by the MIT faculty last May. The new guidelines provided for grouping HASS-D courses into five categories and requiring students to take three subjects, each from a different category.

The main purpose of the changes was to "stimulate a revitalization of the distribution subject offerings," according to the HASS-D (Please turn to page 12)

Several ambitious students camped outside the Office of Career Services on Monday night to avoid the line for interview-sign-ups the next morning. The Career Office has initiated a new early sign-up procedure for students wishing to interview for financial services and consulting firms.}

Khoury reconsiders total number of HASS-D's
By Salman Akhtar
The final number of subjects qualifying for Fall semester, Arts and Social Sciences Distribution status "could go as low as 50 or as high as 80," according to Philip Khoury, associate dean of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences.

Khoury said there was no pre-determined cap on the number of courses being granted HASS-D status, but the Humanities Distribution Overview Committee was mandated by the faculty to try and reduce the number of distribution subjects. As a result of HASS-D reform, the number of subjects with distribution status had fallen from 150 to 100 this semester, Khoury noted.

The changes in the HASS-D requirement came as a result of revised HASS-D guidelines approved by the MIT faculty last May. The new guidelines provided for grouping HASS-D courses into five categories and requiring students to take three subjects, each from a different category.

The main purpose of the changes was to "stimulate a revitalization of the distribution subject offerings," according to the HASS-D (Please turn to page 12)

Hart reveals "Enlightened Engagement" goals
By Darrel Tarasewicz
"For America to reap its rewards in the future, we must change from a consumer to a producer nation," President-elect Gary Hart said Wednesday evening.

This statement came as part of the "Enlightened Engagement" policy that former Senator Gary Hart presented during a lecture held at Kresge auditorium on Wednesday evening.

Amid cheers of "do it!!" Hart said he would have to amend the policy "if he was running for President again, but he felt that the attacks and the pain would return."

Relating the accusations and events which surrounded his departure from the presidential race, Hart said, "I certainly wouldn't want to relive the circumstances, but believing back, the scandal was one of the best things that happened to me. It got me out of the political (Please turn to page 2)