Afghan atrocities echo Soviet policy

Column/K.J. Saeger

The end of the term is just upon us, and for me it is taking a grave toll. The pressures of deadlines and tests are playing tricks on my mind. Last week, I began dreaming or hallucinating some very bizarre events.

While walking down the infite corridor last Friday, I could swear that I saw a board (pos-ibly outside the Undergraduate Academic Support Office) titled "The Faces of Afghanistan." What I saw there was very con-pelling and surprising considering the content of the majority of the political messages littering the corridor walls. Next to a large picture of America's new media sweetheart, Mikhail Gorbatchev, was the face of a small boy, his features mutilated as a conserquence of the Soviet Union. The corridor walls. Next to a large picture of America's new media sweetheart, Mikhail Gorbatchev, was the face of a small boy, his features mutilated as a conse-
