The real threat to the future of the United States will come not from the Soviet Union but from Japan, according to Professor Ezra Vogel, a University of Texas Law School professor and associate director of the Russian Research Center at Harvard University.

Mr. Vogel's views are echoed by Mr. Scowcroft, a veteran Washington insider who has been mentioned as a possible Secretary of State in a Bush administration, strongly disagreed with Ball on US actions in the Persian Gulf. Maintaining a large naval force there has "restored confidence of states in the region and of our European allies that when we make up our minds to do something we can carry it through," used $500 billion in additional trade. The Japanese are continuing to purchase US companies and banks are already Japanese, he said. "I see trade across the Pacific surpassing trans-Atlantic trade."

According to Mr. Vogel, the economy of the United States is in danger of being economically overwhelmed by Japan. The worst, largest, largest government run businesses, insurance companies, and banks are already Japanese, he said. He said the definition, trade across the Pacific surpasses trans-Atlantic trade. The Japanese are concerned that their economy is superior to that of the US, and that "there is little chance that we be behind in 1995," according to Mr. Vogel. He sees Japan moving off on its own militarily, but quietly."
