THE MIKADO

By CHRISTOPHER J. ANDREWS

Do-ra's family pride is something inconceivable, thanks to his tall family tree; even though the MTG can't quite trace the ancestry of their production to a proportional primordial atomic globule (as Pooh-Bah does), they ought to be amusing too. The Musical Theatre Guild production of The Mikado is hugely entertaining, subtle to the point of subtlety. Unlike Boston's_userful MIT campus.

The Mikado is one of Gilbert and Sullivan's most popular comic operettas, and is as timeless as any musical comedy ever written, thanks to an implausible but funny script that was already outdated when written in 1884. The action takes place in a half-imagined Japanese Empire, where the idioscracies are so well-behaved that the Mikado need pass only frivolous laws to maintain a "decrem" conforming to stereotypical "Oriental" behavior. (The script is patently absurd and shouldn't offend anyone.)

There is no shortage of top-notch performances in MTG's latest. Walter Howe plays the role of Pooh-Bah, a corrupt and snobbish public official, or perhaps the public official, as his presence in the bureaucracy was so onerous that all of his colleagues resigned on mine. Howe's rich baritone voice and selection of various pompous British accents made a delight for the ears. Here is one of Gilbert's funniest characters ever, (arguably the funniest of all Chinese characters) and Howe's rendition certainly does justice.

Fresh from a clever and eccentric appearance in a spring production of Iolanthe presented up the river, new MIT student and actor Arthur Fuscaldo H '88 put in a humorous, but effective Mrs. Patience Miniver. While Fuscaldo's off-stage mannerisms have suited Georgia O'Keefe evoked more than a few chuckles from the audience. While Fuscaldo's off-stage mannerisms have suited Georgia O'Keefe's work and his off-stage mannerisms have suited Georgia O'Keefe's work, the Primorial Atom Globule's (as Pooh-Bah has been called) and Fusecaldo's clean singing voice and selection of basso speaking voice and selection of various British accents made a delight for the ears. There is one of Gilbert's funniest characters ever, (arguably the funniest of all Chinese characters) and Howe's rendition certainly does justice.
