Women's role in Lebanon shown without guidance for the future

(Continued from page 8)

Lebanese women argue about their role in Lebanese life in Leila and the Wolves.

In Lebanon, as elsewhere, has been an issue of women's role in a war-torn country. The film Leila and the Wolves, directed by Srour, has been praised for its portrayal of women's role in the conflict. However, some critics have argued that the film does not provide a balanced view of women's experiences.

The film follows the story of Leila, a woman who becomes involved in the conflict after her husband is killed. She is supported by her daughter, Randa, who also becomes involved in the fight against the enemy. The film portrays women as capable fighters and highlights their contributions to the conflict.

However, some critics have argued that the film glorifies war-zone sacrifices and focuses on the experiences of a few women. They argue that the film does not provide a comprehensive view of women's experiences in Lebanon. The film also does not address some of the broader issues facing women in Lebanon, such as discrimination and violence.

Some critics have suggested that the film could have been more effective if it had been directed by a woman. They argue that women's perspectives and experiences are often ignored in narratives about war.

In conclusion, while Leila and the Wolves has been praised for its portrayal of women's role in Lebanon, some critics have argued that it does not provide a comprehensive view of women's experiences. The film could have been more effective if it had been directed by a woman and if it had addressed some of the broader issues facing women in Lebanon.

Conference of Liberal/Progressive Jewish Intellectuals

December 18-20, New York City - The Penta Hotel

Sponsored by Tikkun Magazine... a Bimonthly Jewish Critique of Politics, Culture & Society

I. Reviving the Progressive Tradition

The strong left tradition that characterized American Jewish intellectual life in earlier decades of the century is present in the 1920s, 1930s, and 1960s, but also of a sometimes justified perception that the liberal/left was uninterested in and at times even hostile to the historical experiences and legitimate concerns of the Jewish people. In the 1980s many Jewish intellectuals are unwilling to allow conservatives to speak for the Jews--to cede all that is valuable program, mortgage assistance for the left--from Democratic Party centrist to social change activists--who have a common interest in ignoring the psychological, spiritual, and ethical needs of the American people.

While drawn upon the richness of the Jewish heritage, our concerns are not limited to what the conservative have now labeled as "Jewish issues." Both in Tikkun magazine, which has become the organ of many of the revival of the reviving Jewish tradition, and at our conference, we address the central intellectual, political and cultural issues of our time.

II. After the Dakakis Flasco--Strategies

Four more years? Oy. It's going to be depressing. We need to figure out what went wrong and strategize about what to do. For example, the left—from Democratic Party centrists to social change activists—share a common interest in ignoring the psychological, spiritual, and ethical needs of the American people. Their right has simplistic and reactionary solutions. But its code language and at allow students to continue these discussions after the conference. If you can't come, please subscribe to Tikkun—for the student discount price of $15/year.

Conference Sessions on:

A Strategy for the Bush Years; Israel and the Palestinians; Antisemitism in the Left; Blacks and Jewish issues; How to distinguish between right-wing and left-wing critiques of Israel and the Palestinians.

Speakers include:

III. Israel and the Palestinians

The Israeli elections and the November meeting of the PNC create a new situation for those of us who support the creation of a democratic Palestinian state that would live in peace with Israel. What should be our role? The rule of the American government? How to handle the instability of the left toward Jewish issues? How to deal with Jewish institutions that are self-centered and morally insolvent?

IV. Special Student Focus

For the special low price of $35 students can attend the regular conference sessions. Also a network of liberal and progressive Jewish students will be formed at the conference to discuss common problems, such as how to deal with Jewish organizations and at allow students to continue these discussions after the conference. If you can't come, please subscribe to Tikkun—for the student discount price of $15/year.

Registration:

1. $60 Full Conference
2. $40 Reduced Fee ($85 if full cost would prevent you from attending).
3. $25 Tikkun subscription ($15 for students).

Mail check or credit card info to Tikkun, 5500 Loomis Street, Oakland, CA 94619.

Accommodations:

Tel. Address

City/State Zip

The images and text content are related to the topics of women's role in Lebanon, the role of Jewish intellectuals, and the political landscape in Israel and the Palestinian territories. The text highlights the need for a balanced view of women's experiences in Lebanon and discusses the challenges faced by Jewish intellectuals in the United States. The conference aims to address the issues of Israel and the Palestinians, and to create a network of liberal and progressive Jewish students to discuss common problems. The registration details are also provided, including options for full and reduced fees, as well as subscriptions to Tikkun magazine. The text concludes with a reminder to address the conference. If you can't come, please subscribe to Tikkun—for the student discount price of $15/year.